with our task.

** Looking at the December '95 issue of the Computer magazine, Louis-Felipe Cabrera ( page 84 of this issue ) is the Chair of the IEEE CS-ACM Steering Committee for the Establishment of SE as a Profession. I am not sure whether Mario will have time to listen to us, given his busy Presidential schedules.

Regarding the elusive Don Gotterbarn, you are singularly lucky having got his e-mail. He was in LONDON during Feb 2nd of this year presenting his paper -you guessed it -on ethical issues in SE! This Conf titled " Professional Issues in SE" was organised by my colleague ( who shares the office space with me! ). All that was required of Don -if he was remotely interested was to give me a call spending as little as a quarter or ask my colleague who was a cochair or take a brisk walk worth 15 minutes from the venue or use his subway ticket purchased for the day for a 5 minute ride TO GET ME AT MY UNIVERSITY ( I had to take my graduate-level classes that day)!

There is another group chaired by Keith Miller who has contacted me re: Reliability and Safety standards-related work within the Ethics framework. You will not be surprised to note that he also cc: our beloved Don! I moaned about Don's insular habits these days to Miller in a cynical way. He seems enthusiastic with this reliability and safety work!

I suggest we all produce a single e-mail message to Cabrera about Don's refusal to communicate with us.

I feel that the whole exercise- plethora of workgroups is fast becoming a big joke.
