Dear Don: There has been really nice progress on the Code. ~~Since~~ you asked for comments, I think that in your section on functions, you should make clear that your way of understanding the distinction between codes of ethics, codes of conduct, and codes of practice is one way to categorize. There is hardly unanimity about this 3-fold division. Your way makes sanctions figure importantly. Not all commentators do so. Under education, ~~you should~~ the text should indicate that the profession expresses through its code of ethics its commitment to serve the public or alternately the code is devised to help the profession serve the public. You use "normative" in a distinctive, unusual way. Best, Vivian Weil
