Don:

When I was at the APPE conference in DC, I talked to Vivian Weil of the Illinois Institute of Technology. She has been interested in our long and arduous adventure trying to bang out an ethics code. I told her in general about some of our difficulties, but I felt uncomfortable about going into any specifics since I don't know how much of what we have discussed and emailed is confidential. But she and her colleagues at IIT are trying to understand the process of code making, and I think our story would be of great interest to them.

Anyway, would you please email Vivian and give her a thumbnail sketch of what's been going on? Also, if you think it is appropriate, add her to the list of people getting copies of our code drafts. She is:

weil@charlie.cns.iit.edu (Vivian Weil)

I've copied this message to her.

Thanks, Don. I can tell you are busy. Did you get my comments on the draft before you sent out this one?

Keith
